HISTORIA Y TRADICIÓN

The first evidence of wine in the area is to be found in the ancient Celtiberian city of Segeda. There, the remains of a vast wine vat with a capacity of 2,000 litres was found and examined, it is one of the oldest to exist in the Spanish territories and indeed in Europe, and one of the oldest in a conserved state to have such a large capacity. Archaeological studies have also shown without doubt, that red wine was produced in this vat and that production stopped in 153 BC.

La primera evidencia de vinificación en la zona se encuentra en los restos de la antigua ciudad celtíbera de Segeda. Allí se ha encontrado y se han podido estudiar los restos de un gran lagar de vino con una capacidad de unos 2.000 litros, uno de los más antiguos de los que existen en el conjunto de España y también de Europa, y uno de los pocos que se conservan con tanta capacidad. Además, los estudios arqueológicos realizados indican que en este lagar se producía vino tinto sin dar lugar a duda alguna y que fue abandonado en el año 153 A.C.

SOME CENTURIES LATER, MORE SPECIFICALLY TOWARDS THE MIDDLE OF THE 19TH CENTURY, THE LANGA FAMILY BEGAN A LONG AND ARDUOUS JOURNEY CONNECTED TO THE THOUSAND YEAR OLD CULTURE OF WINE.

In the nineteenth century, from this rich history and from the wine makers who had contributed to it, sprang some traditional wineries with a commercial approach to wine production. This was the moment when, in 1867, the family, headed by Juan Langa Gallego, began a long, arduous and difficult albeit a magical and passionate journey through the world of wine. Mariano Langa Gallego was succeeded by Juan Langa Mariscal who, on his return from the Cuban War in 1898, would not take long to put a new shine onto the family business.

In 1940, the reins of the family business were taken up by Juan and Sebastian Langa Langa, who maintain wineries in Morata de Jiloca, Calatayud y Jaca. Both brothers manage to maintain a tight export trade with France, which will in the future suppose a gateway to the rest of Europe.

The winery today

LA BODEGA HOY

Bodegas Langa today is the principle winery in Calatayud and the only one to treasure a long and interrupted family tradition. The winery is found in an emblematic spot, considered as magical by the number of human settlements that have resided in the area. The Sierra Vicor mountain range, on whose slopes we are found, was a sacred place for the Celtiberians and had a prominent place in the work of the classical poet Marcus Valerius Martialis.

A space where technology and the most modern materials live alongside the traditional methods of understanding wine making. A firmly established philosophy that wine isn't just a consumer product, but more, something which unites the essence of the natural environment where we nurture our vines, the culture accumulated over thousands

Moreover the winery is a place of retreat, tranquillity, the perfect place for the maturing and aging of the wines until they reach the ideal moment from when they can be enjoyed. A place in which you can feel the implication of a family devoted to maintaining this way of wine making, who look after and monitor the vats, the barrels and the bottles that accompany the wine along its journey through the making and aging process.

Our way of understanding wine and its culture has meant us keeping faith with the cultivation of the area's most traditional varieties of grape like the garnacha. However, we have also opted for other varieties that have been integrated into the DO Calatayud. Grapes that lend quality and distinction to some rounded and well structured wines. A path we began many decades ago, which we have taken with success and which has since been taken by other wineries.

This way, far from the rush, but without ever letting up on our work around-the-clock, Bodegas Langa has managed to become leader and bulwark of Aragonese Cava and the principle benchmark in the Domination of Origin of Calatayud. A fact which is easily understood when you realise the secret, which is non other than being a family steeped in experience, and which for five generations has woken up everyday, to make what they want to make, and what they know how to make: FINE WINE.
